

Your Regular Minute

Daniel Prior

'I wonder if it will be the same for everyone.'

'It's very likely, only I'm more aware.'

'Wouldn't that make it different?'

'And that is why Plato defended that thought is a form of dialogue between the soul and itself,' said the Philosophy professor.

'And why the hell do I know what someone is going to say before they say it?' 'It happens to me everywhere. Conversations, classes, even with the TV. Now I remember Coral.'

'Clara has turned around. They have the same blond, of course.'

'I move her pencil and she turns around. Well'.

'I can also remember what I have thought and in what order.'

'Guessing words is sometimes even useful, for example when someone gets stuck.'

'Now I remember when I came to a new place when I was little and I wanted to pretend that I liked football.'

'Until I was discovered, of course, but I just wanted to fit in.'

'I didn't do anything wrong, and yet I'm ashamed of it.'

'But above all, why am I thinking about this now?'

'Well then, we better not even talk about how spoiled you were as a child.'

'Yes better'.

'But since we have brought up the subject...'

'What a curse!'

'Remember, soul and mind come from the ancient Greek psyché,' said the professor, pointing to the blackboard.

'Look at the clock'.

'Too much free time, Agustin...'

'How cool, by the way, it's like I'm giving orders to myself'...